Publications

- Caio Lorecchio, Daniel Monte (2023). Bad Reputation with Simple Rating Systems. Games and Economic Behavior, 142, 150-178.

We explore how simple rating systems can mitigate the negative effects of reputational concerns in online reputation systems, particularly in scenarios involving long-lived experts and short-lived customers.

- Caio Lorecchio, Daniel Monte (2023). Dynamic Information Design under Constrained Communication Rules. American Economic Journal: Microeconomics, 15(1), 359-98.

We examine how an information designer can persuade agents to invest in a project under communication constraints that limit belief spread and hinder persuasion.

Ongoing Projects

- Caio Lorecchio, Oriol Tejada, Gerard Domènech-Gironell (2024). Information Acquisition in Deliberative Democracies. Under review.

We study how deliberation in democracies impacts costly information acquisition and electoral outcomes. While it can enhance legitimacy and accuracy, it may also lead to free-riding or over-reliance on political experts.

- Caio Lorecchio, William Fuchs, Vladimir Asriyan (2024). Multilateral Bargaining with Information Spillovers. Work in progress.

Correlated demands rationalize more dynamic pricing than what classic bargaining models suggest.

- Caio Lorecchio, Braz Camargo, Laura Karpuska (2023). Political Accountability and Misinformation. Work in progress.

We study how misinformation affects political accountability. Misinformation can negatively impact effective accountability, but also, perhaps counter-intuitively, can increase it.

- Caio Lorecchio (2022). Persuading Crowds. Working paper.

I examine crowd manipulation through dynamic info design, and show when to induce herd behavior from the outset and when to withhold decisive releases for later periods.
