- M.S. in Economics São Paulo School of Economics, FGV, 2015-2017.
- Visiting Student, Sciences Po, 2011-2012.
- B.S. in International Relations, University of Brasília, 2008-2013.

Current Position

Assistant Professor in Economic Theory, University of Barcelona, 2023-present.

Past Positions

- Postdoctoral Researcher in Economic Theory, University of Barcelona, 2021-2023.
- Lecturer in Game Theory, Insper, 2021.

Other Activities

- Member of the Research Group in Welfare Economics (CREB).
- Member of the Barcelona Economic Analysis Team (BEAT).

Publications

- Caio Lorecchio, Daniel Monte (2023). Bad Reputation with Simple Rating Systems. Games and Economic Behavior, 142, 150-178.

  We explore how simple rating systems can mitigate the negative effects of reputational concerns in online reputation systems, particularly in scenarios involving long-lived experts and short-lived customers.

- Caio Lorecchio, Daniel Monte (2023). Dynamic Information Design under Constrained Communication Rules. American Economic Journal: Microeconomics, 15(1), 359-98.

  We examine how an information designer can persuade agents to invest in a project under communication constraints that limit belief spread and hinder persuasion.

Ongoing Projects

- Caio Lorecchio, William Fuchs, Vladimir Asriyan (2026). Multilateral Bargaining with Information Spillovers. Working Paper.

  We study dynamic monopoly pricing with buyers whose valuations are correlated, so that one buyer's purchase reveals information about the others. These information spillovers can strengthen or weaken the seller's commitment power and generate multiple equilibria.

  Armen Alchian Award, Annual Meeting of the Armenian Economic Association, 2026.

- Caio Lorecchio (2026). Persuading Crowds. Working paper.

  I study dynamic persuasion when agents learn from each other's actions, so social learning moves beliefs beyond the principal's control. The principal can do no better than when actions are unobservable, and when he cannot reach that bound, each disclosure is less informative, yet society learns more over time.

- Caio Lorecchio, Oriol Tejada, Gerard Domènech-Gironell (2025). Public Deliberation and Political Learning in Democracy. Working Paper.

  We show that public deliberation can lead voters to free-ride on costly information, but can also create informed political experts, raising or lowering electoral accuracy.

- Caio Lorecchio, Braz Camargo, Laura Karpuska (2023). Political Accountability and Misinformation. Working Paper.

  We study how misinformation affects political accountability. Misinformation can negatively impact effective accountability, but also, perhaps counter-intuitively, can increase it.
